Support Strong Net Neutrality.

I work for a start up that depends upon net neutrality for it's existence and future growth. It is 100% clear to me, that changing the laws and giving the big boys the power seat will take the future of employment, job creation and small businesses in the USA, in the wrong direction. I'm mystified as to why you at the FCC can not see this potential reality. Anything less strong than net neutrality will be an example of democracy and capitalism being tossed in the garbage.

On a personal note, I pay quite enough already for access to the internet. There is no reason to believe that I would see a benefit in services or fees if the ISPs were given more power. In fact we only have one choice for an ISP because of were we live. Now there is a change that business can take an extremely important, basic and necessary utility of contemporary life, make it cost more, and provide worse service.

I believe the FCC should protect the everyday American consumer from giving the power of the internet to corporations. We need the internet to look for work, create & sell art, create jobs, communicate with medical professionals, pay our bills, communicate and stay connected to family, for education, and entertainment.

It is as basic and necessary as electricity.

Christine Harrington